John Forrest Silver Pocket Watch? Hallmarked Chester 1900, comes with key working order with replacement glass which is now plastic and missing one finger - we do not guarantee the accuracy. John Forrest ran a watchmaking business in Clerkenwell, London from 1850 until he died in 1871. John Forrest lacked in watchmaking ability, he more than made up for with his marketing prowess. On the movement plates, he stamped the words, John Forrest, chronometer maker to the Admiralty. This statement was totally untrue because John Forrest had never made a chronometer in his entire career. Forrest would make a new watch and send it to the Admiralty as a free sample. In his mind, this justified his claim to be a maker to the Admiralty. As a marketing ploy, it worked very successfully and John Forrest sold many of his 'maker to the Admiralty' watches. Such was his success, that upon his death, there were a number of enterprising watchmakers willing to buy the rights to the John Forrest name. The use of the name of John Forrest was used by a number of other watchmakers and manufacturers well into the 20th £150-200

WWII German Operation Bernhard Counterfeit £5 Note: Operation Bernhard was an exercise by Nazi Germany to forge British bank notes. The initial plan was to drop the notes over Britain to bring about a collapse of the British economy during the Second World War. The first phase was run from early 1940 by the Sicherheitsdienst (SD) under the title Unternehmen Andreas (Operation Andreas). The unit successfully duplicated the rag paper used by the British, produced near-identical engraving blocks and deduced the algorithm used to create the alpha-numeric serial code on each note. The unit closed in early 1942 after its head, Alfred Naujocks, fell out of favour with his superior officer, Reinhard Heydrich £60-100

Winter Charity Relief Painted Pottery Badges: all measure approximately 2.5cm in height, 17 in total. In Nazi Germany the Winterhilfswerk (Winter Charity Campaign, or WHW) collection campaigns took place each Winter and raised a great deal of money for charitable purposes. It was common place for those who collected the contributions to give donors a small memento to show appreciation for their contribution, and by wearing the memento, it was obvious the donor had contributed money. One usually parted with a few Pfennigs. There were many campaigns connected with the WHW each year at the national level and at the Gau or state level. Each month from October through March, the money collected was set aside to help those who were hungry or cold. Badges were made in series, the idea being you kept donating to collect a whole series. Series of badges only lasted for up to a week, meaning an individual was encouraged to make a donation every day. 'Can rattlers' or 'brown shirts' wandered through busy streets, pubs and restaurants at meal times collecting donations. Businesses were encouraged to donate a monthly amount and received a sticker or poster for their shopfront window, so they could display it for all to see they were 'doing their part' for charity and the war effort. The Abzeichen or mementos given to contributors to these and other charity campaigns in Third Reich Germany varied widely from flowers to metal badges, but most were simple enough to be manufactured at home by unemployed hand crafters or by very small enterprises, what we'd call cottage industry. Some WHW mementos are superb pieces of art and others are very simple. Some include semi-precious stones, others beautifully embroidered. They were plastic, metal, wooden, fabric, glass pottery and porcelain. All have been collected since the day they were made and are sought after today. As well as WHW badges, postcards, stamps, first day covers and propaganda booklets were gifted for a donation. Tinnies were also purchased to support the war effort and were often souvenirs of events such as Rallies, Sports Festivals, Public Holidays and groups - Navy, Infantry, Airforce, returned soldiers, youth, guilds etc £60-80

WW2 German Model 1939 Pony Fur Tournister Backpack
This original German Tournister backpack is a model 1939. It has pony fur on the front side. The backpack is of canvas with brown leather buckles. Comes also with the shoulder straps. The inside opens with two flaps. There are additional pockets on the reverse of the front flap. The backpack measures approximately 14 inches (37cm) high by 12 inches (30.5cm) wide and 4 inches (10cm) deep. Markings on the leather back are: stamp D/1001/0288 pony fur and canvas covered rucksacks such as these were officially called Tornister (Knapsack), first designed in 1934, and were used throughout the German armed forces. The design of this pack was later changed in 1938 to have shoulder straps that interfaced with the pistol belt as well as the bottom of the pack. As the war progressed the design was simplified to use less cowhide, and this version is the second, with pony fur against the back but with the rest of the pack just being canvas with leather trim.
